

LUCY STORRS

Lucy Storrs is a contemporary wool artist celebrated for her innovative approach to fiber art. Her work combines traditional techniques with a modern aesthetic, resulting in pieces that evoke the textures and rhythms of the natural world.

Being the youngest of a set of triplets in a family of seven siblings growing up in a deprived hill sheep farm in Devon, Storrs set out to explore her place in the world away from Devon in search of her identity. Ironically, she has come full circle by embracing her past and finding her voice with wool as her primary artistic material where she carefully selects and transforms this organic material into richly layered creations that capture a sense of movement and life. Her art reflects a deep respect for nature and a commitment to sustainable, mindful practices.

Storrs has exhibited her work through a number of art fairs and galleries. Her dedication to her art and attention to detail have earned her a growing following among collectors and art enthusiasts alike.
